

Peer Review

Review of: "The Price of Living a Full Life and Experiencing Well-Being: Why a Dignified Life Costs Thousands of Dollars per Person – And Why This Is a Structural Question for Nations"

María Mercedes Di Virgilio^{1,2}

1. Instituto de Investigaciones Gino Germani, University of Buenos Aires, Argentina; 2. CONICET

The article addresses the issue of well-being by considering both subjective aspects and structural and social factors. It is based on systematic reviews and data from institutions such as the OECD, which lends credibility to its arguments. It introduces the idea of a “minimum income standard,” bringing the discussion on minimum income or citizen income policies to the forefront.

Declarations

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.