

Review of: "How Well Are We Protecting Human Research Subjects?"

Asaad Babker¹

¹ Gulf Medical University, United Arab Emirates

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

- While the article discusses the development of performance metrics, it would benefit from providing specific examples or data from early implementations of these metrics. This could help illustrate their impact on current practices and participant safety more clearly.
- The review could further explore the philosophical and ethical implications of the changes made over the years. This would add depth to the discussion of moral responsibilities in research.
- An acknowledgment of the challenges faced in the implementation of the performance metrics, such as resistance from institutions or variations in the interpretation of the metrics, would provide a more balanced view of the current state of research protections.