The topic discussed in this commentary is critical. I strongly agree with the author regarding the analysis of the current situation. A serious problem exists, that is a matter of fact!

While I fully agree with the evaluation of the situation, I'm not sure about the solution advanced by the author. The existence of a payment to the reviewers is not enough, in my opinion, to solve this problem.

As an alternative, I suggest the development of metrics aimed to capture the quality of the publications (at the paper, journal, and author levels).
