

Peer Review

Review of: "Impostor in the Mirror: A Clinician's Reflection on Impostor Syndrome"

Ali Ergur¹

1. Sociology, Galatasaray University, Turkey

It is an interesting topic. I have read the text with great interest. Indeed, the author describes, with considerable accuracy, a relatively less-analyzed problem, which is in fact a widely shared experience among physicians. Although this is not an article, a relatively larger literature should be mentioned while depicting such an important issue. I suggest to the author to add the following references for a wider perspective, if he finds them useful for his argumentation.

Paladugu, Wasser, Donato (2020). Impostor syndrome in hospitalists, a cross-sectional study, Journal of Community Hospital Internal Medicine Perspectives, 11(2), 212-215.

Hawley, K. (2019). Conspiracy theories, impostor syndrome and distrust, Philosophical Studies, 176(4), 969-980.

This commentary has the potential to serve as a guide for those who will be inspired by it for further comprehensive research.

This is a well-conceived commentary that I qualify as suitable for publishing.

Declarations

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.