

Review of: "Addiction as a Loss of Inner Freedom"

Gül Kadan

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

In particular, discussing addiction from every angle and basing it on evidence enabled the purpose of the research to be clearly revealed. However, it could also be emphasized that an individual who is addicted may have reasons influenced by his/her environment, regardless of what type of addiction it is. Examples of the struggle to prove oneself could be given, especially regarding the developmental characteristics of adolescence. Although it was given in the research, it could have been enriched. Another point that caught my attention: Could it be included in this research? I would like to ask. It can be stated that behavioral problems that develop as a result of the child's use of addictive substances, especially during childhood and adolescence, and having to leave school, may also be effective in the continuation of addiction. I think it is especially important to address addiction, which becomes chronic in life, starting from the early period. Due to this importance, I think that adding the topic I mentioned will enrich the research. I can say that one reason for this is to increase the awareness of families on this issue, and the other is to ensure that teachers include these children in the school system instead of excluding them. However, I would like to point out that it is a meticulous study. Thank you.