Although the subject is of interest to the scientific community and the sample used can provide an important vision, and necessary for the prevention of violence, the number of interviews is not sufficient to consider it a significant sample. The study is presented incorporating the gender perspective, however, it is limited to making a disaggregated analysis by sex. It is recommended to expand the sample and go deeper into the analysis methodology of this type of study, if the condition of the role of gender among the analyzed population is to be presented.
