Dear author,

although the theme is interesting, it seems to me that one cannot generalize the results as then sample is small, the context is very specific, and the localization where it was done has specifications that are completely different (culturally, socially, etc.) from many other parts of the globe.

Even so, the work is interesting.

What I felt less developed was a discussion based on the results with the literature review. What the data tells you? Are they inline with previous research? Yes? No?

Finally, you said in the introduction that the conclusions should help educational managers to define education strategies regarding the internships and the interaction between academia and the professional world, but I didn't find this evidence clearly explained in your work.

Wish you good luck with your work.
