

Review of: "Effective Communication in Virtual Project Teams at Children Mission Africa: A Short Communication"

Juan C. Marcillo-Delgado¹

¹ Universidad Politécnica de Catalunya

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The methodology section is crucial for understanding how the study was conducted. It would be beneficial to provide more details on how participants were selected, how interviews and observations were conducted, and how data were analyzed. This will increase the transparency and reproducibility of the study.

While a general overview of the findings is provided, it would be helpful to include specific examples or case studies to illustrate the points discussed. Additionally, the discussion could be expanded to show how these findings relate to existing literature and contribute to the field of study.

Although some sources are cited, it would be beneficial to include more relevant references to support the claims and arguments presented in the article. This will strengthen the theoretical foundation and increase the credibility of the study.

The final recommendations could be more specific and detailed. Concrete actions that organizations can take to improve communication in virtual project teams, based on the findings of the study, could be included.