Especially for information about LGBT and Islam, the author needs to confirm the community's attitude and Islamic legal doctrine. Islamic law regulates the civil rights and regulations of LGBT religious rituals but does not negate this group. Therefore, the author needs to clarify whether the method used in writing this article is a literature review or a phenomenon analysis. If literature is used, the author needs to check a number of references regarding the regulation of LGBT religious and civil law. Islamic law or fiqh recognizes their existence by providing systematic regulations regarding the procedures and validity of their worship. This means that, doctrinally, Islam does not negate LGBT, but socially, followers of Islam have their own views and attitudes towards LGBT. Therefore, the author needs to differentiate between religious doctrine and the religious attitudes of its adherents, including highlighting other religions.
