

Review of: "Online learning during the COVID-19 pandemic, lessons learned and what's next?"

Aman Gupta¹

¹ University of Detroit Mercy

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Author has made a great effort in collecting and putting the information together. Introduction is bit too long and could have been put in a more sorted manner (student perspective, faculty's perspective, challenges faced by developed or underdeveloped countries etc and the role of universities). Some grammatical errors could have been easily avoided.

Filling the gap heading could be changed with 'Unfilled Gap' based on the content discussed in this section and similarly 'Who is paying the price'

Enjoyed reading best practices. 'What next' section should only discuss the 'What next'.

Overall, there are plenty of good points in the entire article but the content needs rearrangement.

Today the education providers are trying to find their options out of what is available. They are looking for information on the most practical methods or tools that are actually effective.