

Review of: "Sacred Plants and Their Miraculous or Healing Properties"

Abraham Escobedo-Moratilla

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The manuscript covers various topics about sacred plants used in religious and/or traditional ancient practices. In general, it is well-written and communicates the idea of this type of plant and the historical context to the reader. In my opinion, it could be improved for publication, taking into account the following issues:

1. It is desirable to include a table and/or a map with all the plants mentioned in section 3.1, as well as the different variables and addressed points of each, to present a better projection of the information.
2. Add a subsection in sections 4 and 5 (Discussions 1 and 2) on plants' regulatory or legal situation. Even if it is included in the sections, separating them from the other text is essential due to the complexity of law language.
3. The conclusions should focus only on the review's objectives and purposes.