

Review of: "Soccer fans, stadium attendance, and interpersonal trust in the Mexican population"

Sara Quintero-Ramírez¹

¹ Universidad de Guadalajara

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The study is very well documented. There is a very good theoretical support, since there are traditional and meaningful authors such as Bordieu and there are updated authors such as Forsell et al. The results are interesting and described very clearly through the presentation of tables.

However, my only observation is about the methodology. First of all, I think the author should explain why the study is quantitative and non-experimental. This could be too obvious, but I think it should be stated in a couple of paragraphs. Furthermore, the author does not mention how the corpus (or the sample) was constituted. It is important to describe the criteria used in order to come up with such a sample.

I hope my observations are useful.