

Review of: "Women in Slum, Risking Their Safety to Access and Usage of Basic Sanitation Facilities-A Literature Review"

Heinz Peter Mang¹

¹ University of Science and Technology Beijing

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Your article on the impact of lack of access to clean water and sanitation on women and girls is well-written and informative. Here are a few suggestions for improvement:

Introduction: The introduction provides a clear definition of a slum and the challenges faced by its inhabitants. However, it would be beneficial to include a brief overview of the article's main points to guide the reader.

Citations: Ensure that all your citations are correctly formatted and consistent throughout the article. For instance, "(Rev., 2015)" seems to be missing some information.

Structure: The flow of the article is generally good, but there are some abrupt transitions. For example, the transition from discussing the definition of sanitation to the vulnerability of women could be smoother.

Clarity: Some sentences are quite long and could be broken down for clarity. For example, "Men and women experience access to water and sanitation services and the fulfilment of these essential human rights differently." could be split into two sentences for better readability.

Grammar: There are a few grammatical errors that need to be addressed. For instance, "The United Nations General Assembly officially recognized that access to clean water and sanitation are critical to the realization of all other basic human rights (Tembo, 2022)." should be "The United Nations General Assembly officially recognized that access to clean water and sanitation is critical to the realization of all other basic human rights (Tembo, 2022)."

Terminology: Ensure that all abbreviations are defined before they're used in the text. For example, you used "PTs" without defining it first.

I hope these suggestions help! Keep up the good work.