I think this is an interesting article, a review of the cruises of Italian tourism. It reads well and has good references and projections. However, it would strengthen the paper if there were a section in the introduction about the contribution to knowledge or to the literature, why this is an important study, and how it differs from other studies. Furthermore, a section about the methods employed would be a wise thing to have. Finally, the scenarios for the future were limited. It would be good to expand these scenarios for the cruise tourism industry.
