

Review of: "Ancient Houses in Ben Tre City: A Multifaceted Approach to Preserve Artistic Architectural Heritage and Boost Local Tourism"

Weilun Kong

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article takes a positive attitude towards the protection of ancient buildings in the city, which is worthy of affirmation. I have the following two suggestions. First, some grammar may need to be improved; for example, some sentence structures are incomplete. Second, can the photos in the article reflect the characteristics of 100-year-old buildings? Are they markedly different from contemporary Vietnamese architecture? For example, in what way do you see French architecture? Are there any writings or other signs?