

Open Peer Review on Qeios

Catholicity in thirteen words

Pablo Blanco¹

¹ Universidad de Navarra

Funding: No specific funding was received for this work.

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Abstract

I had to give an introductory course on Christianity to university students in a post-Christian era. How could I surprise or interest them? How could I help them understand? This is the question that has occupied me for years. So, I tried to summarize the Christian faith (creed, sacraments, commandments, prayer) in thirteen words, also with a point of provocation. Not three, not seven, nor twelve: thirteen! And these came to me little by little, as I went on to explain them historically, according to what we call the history of salvation. In the end, my words were: Creation, Bible, Covenant, Flesh, Person, Easter, Church, Glory, Grace, Freedom, Truth, Love, Prayer.

Pablo Blanco-Sarto

University of Navarra

I had to give an introductory course on Christianity to university students in a post-Christian era. How could I surprise or interest them? How could I help them understand? This is the question that has occupied me for years. So, I tried to summarize the Christian faith (creed, sacraments, commandments, prayer) in thirteen words, also with a point of provocation. Not three, not seven, nor twelve: thirteen! And these came to me little by little, as I went on to explain them historically, according to what we call the history of salvation. In the end, my words were: Creation, Bible, Covenant, Flesh, Person, Easter, Church, Glory, Grace, Freedom, Truth, Love, Prayer.¹

1. First the Creation, in favor of which the ecological sensitivity of the present moment played a role. "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth" (Gen 1:1), that is, everything. Not good and evil, or yin and yang. He created everything out of nothing, and not out of pre-existing matter. God is the being and author of all beings. The Big Bang theory or evolutionism must be compatible with the story contained in the first pages of the Bible. Creation is a Big Bang also of love and sense. There is also the origin of evil, which comes from the devil (real and personal being) and from our personal freedom².
2. The Bible actually means "the collection of books", that are considered to be inspired by God. How can we know this? First of all, because of the coherence between the different writings, and then because the Church, the first believing community, does a work of sifting and discernment that allows it to understand which books are true and which are fake. And how can we read the Bible, alone or in solidarity? We read it – so to speak – in a choral, symphonic way. We do not read the Bible alone, or only the Bible. We read it in a certain context, which is the faith of the whole Church in all times and places³.

3. The concept of Covenant runs through the history of Israel and the salvation, of Judaism and Christianity. Thus, a Christian does not believe alone but accompanied by all the preceding history: Adam and Eve, Abraham and Sarah, Moses, the prophets and kings... Therefore, faith and salvation came little by little through concrete people and history. But the people of Israel returned to infidelity and fell also then under the power of foreign peoples like the Assyrians, the Babylonians, the Greeks, and the Romans, longing then for the freedom that Yahweh had given to his people. At the end comes the liberation, whose name is Jesus⁴.
4. In the Incarnation, "the Word became flesh" (Jn 1:14), which is a provocation in a world that tends alternatively to materialism or spiritualism. If the world was good from creation, the flesh will be blessed by the person of the incarnate Word. "What is not assumed is not saved", said Gregory Nazianzen, an ancient and wise Christian. But we must take into account the reality of sins, both original and personal. The flesh blessed by the person of the Word can also be corrupted and degraded by us. But there is always the hope of salvation: our sins can be forgiven. The Son of God becomes man so that we, the children of men, may become children of God⁵.
5. Then comes the concept of Person, because – together with the Incarnation – the main dogma of Christianity is the Trinity: three distinct Persons, one God. And is this important for our daily life? Of course, because otherwise we would be monotheists just like the Jews or the Muslims. We are called to the community with the Trinity. In Christ, we have come to know the Father, the Son, and the Spirit. This means that there is unity and difference from the beginning, and that Christianity is not monistic or monolithic, but appreciates diversity in unity. Moreover, we can explain the Trinity on the basis of truth and love, also the noblest of human beings⁶.
6. And the Passover, where are born the sacraments, which for Christianity also have a vital importance. The Passover came from the Jewish tradition when a lamb renewed the covenant of Yahweh with his people, and recalled the exodus, the liberation of the chosen people from the slavery of Egypt. But now the victim will be Jesus himself, the sacrificial lamb, who will die for us on the cross. However, as we know, the story does not end there, since he is resurrected on the third day, so we recover the eternity we had lost with the original sin. And we even improve it. With the ascension into heaven, what we might call the "ceremony of the inauguration" of heaven takes place⁷.
7. Then the Church, as a continuation of the salvific action of Jesus Christ. Faced with the slogan "Christ yes, Church no" we must understand that the Church is nothing other than the body, the bride of Christ: inseparable from Him, but distinct from Him. But the Church is here to make Jesus Christ present. As the Fathers of the Church also said, "Christ is the sun, but the Church is the moon that reflects the light of the sun"⁸.
8. And then comes the final glory. We have been created not for death but for eternity. With Easter, Christ has conquered eternity and heaven for us. Eternity is impossible to think or imagine, but it is our true life. This is only a test in which we conquer an eternity of love or hate. Heaven is nothing else but love won. God, who is love, wants to give us an eternity of love. But it is also true that this heaven depends on what we love on earth: in the evening of life, we will be judged in love, by love⁹.
9. Grace is heaven on earth. It is to taste eternal bliss. Grace is not a liquid or a gaseous element within us, but the presence of the Spirit. God lives within us, to the point that we can say with St. Paul: "It is not I who live, but Christ lives in me" (Gal 2:2). I am me, but I am not only me: I am Christ. Without losing any of our personality, it is enriched by the personality of Jesus Christ. And this is a tremendous gain: identification with Jesus Christ. But it is necessary to grow in the life of grace¹⁰.

10. But grace without Freedom is not operative. Freedom – it is often said – is a stone so heavy, so heavy, that not even God – the Omnipotent, the Almighty – could move it. If you do not want to (so strong), God cannot. For without freedom you cannot love, and that is the only thing God wants. He begs for our love. Christian ethics can be summed up in the beatitudes and the commandments. The beatitudes are the self-portrait of Jesus Christ: we identify with Him when we are poor in spirit, clean of heart, persecuted, hungry and thirsty for justice... And the commandments – shared with the Jews and with other religions – are those instructions for the use of the human being, with which we can make the most of our nature¹¹.
11. The next word is Truth, because freedom without it remains blind and disoriented. "The truth sets you free" (Jn 8:32), Jesus tells us. That truth not only sets us free in a general way but also in a personal way. We can grow in that freedom to the extent that we know ourselves better and know how to rectify the course of our conduct. For Christians, however, this truth is identified with a Person, that of Jesus Christ: "I am the Truth" (Jn 14:6). In reality, as Pascal said, we know ourselves best in Jesus Christ. That is why this personal contact with him is totally sharp¹².
12. But Truth without Love is hard. Sometimes we can see it in ourselves, when we are treated with truth but without charity, without affection. There is a feedback between love and truth: truth allows love not to fall into arbitrariness or sentimentality, while love makes it possible for truth to establish itself in our lives. When we consider sex or social justice, for example, we must consider both realities together. But to consider this we have to take into account all that has been said above about human dignity and eternal destiny, in order to understand it in depth. Love could have been the last word, for indeed it has the last word in Christianity (cf. 1 Cor 1:13)¹³.
13. But I wanted to end this list with Prayer, because this is how the Catechism of the Catholic Church ends, after having reviewed the creed, the sacraments, and the commandments. We can fulfill the commandments in their fullness thanks to the grace – and this is redundant – that comes to us through the sacraments but also through prayer. And the prayer par excellence is the Our Father, for it was Jesus himself who taught it to us. There, he reveals to us that we are children of God, something essential for the Christian life. God is my Father, come what may. Therefore, the Christian's prayer must be a filial prayer: the prayer of the children of God¹⁴.

Footnotes

¹ Cf. James J. BUCKLEY, Frederick Christian BAUERSCHMIDT – Trent POMPLUN (eds.), The Blackwell Companion to Catholicism, Oxford: Wiley-Blackwell, 2011; Robert BARRON, Catholicism: A Journey to the Heart of the Faith, New York: Random House, 2011; Pablo BLANCO, Cristianismo en 13 palabras. Preguntas y respuestas sobre la fe, Madrid: Rialp, 2022.

² See Catechism of the Catholic Faith (=CCC), Nr. 279–421; José MORALES, Creation Theology, Dublin: Four Courts

Press, 2001

³ See CCC Nr. 50–141; Stephen J. BINZ, Introduction to the Bible: A Catholic Guide to Studying Collegeville: Liturgical Press, 2007.

⁴ Cf. Scott HAHN, Understanding the Scriptures: A Complete Course on Bible Studybooks, Chicago: Midwest Theological Forum, 2005.

⁵ See CCC Nr. 457–570; Anthony Marinelly, The Word Made Flesh: An Overview of the Catholic Faith, New York: Paulist, 1992; Stephen J. BINZ, Jesus the Word Made Flesh, Part One: John 1-10 New London: Twenty third, 2011.

⁶ Cf. CCC Nr. 198–268, 422–455, 683–747; Gilles EMERY, The Trinity: An Introduction to Catholic Doctrine on the Triune God, Washington: Catholic University of America, 2011.

⁷ See CCC Nr. 571–667, 1066–1666; Joseph RATZINGER, Jesus of Nazareth: From the Entrance Into Jerusalem to the Resurrection, San Francisco: Ignatius, 2011.

⁸ Cf. CCC Nr. 748–975; Thomas P. RAUSCH, Towards a Truly Catholic Church: An Ecclesiology for the Third Millennium Collegeville: Liturgical Press, 2005.

⁹ See CCC Nr. 988–1065; Matthew R. PLESE, Eschatology: The Catholic Study of the Four Last Things Raleigh: The Goldhead Group, 2015.

¹⁰ Cf. CCC Nr. 1987–2029; Juan Luis LORDA, La gracia de Dios, Madrid: Palabra, 2004.

¹¹ See CCC Nr. 1730–1748; Clive Staples LEWIS, The Abolition of Man, New York, Harper, 2001.

¹² Cf. CCC Nr. 1716–1729, 2052–2557; JOHN PAUL II, The Splendor of the Truth (1993).

¹³ See CCC Nr. 2083–2550; BENEDICT XVI, God is love (2006).

¹⁴ Cf. CCC 2759–2865; Clive Staples LEWIS, Letters to Malcolm: Chiefly on Prayer, London: Harper Collins 2020.