I enjoyed reading the article "Analyze the Influence of Socio-Economic Conditions of Parents on the Personality of Christian Teachers in Tambaksari District, Surabaya." This article is very interesting. There are a few of my notes: (1) Introduction: the core problem being studied (the Personality of Christian Teachers in Tambaksari District, Surabaya) has not yet emerged, although the authors have tried to retrieve the results of the study "The Influence of Teacher Personality Competence on Student Learning Motivation at MTsN 2 Bone, Bone Regency" as the basis of the problem, the context is different. Researchers examine the context of Surabaya. So, the background needs to be based on the issues in Surabaya. (2) The research results still need to be visible; please provide a table and description. (3) The discussion of research results has yet to be visible, let alone become sharp and in-depth. I suggest giving triangulation data (the research results are almost the same) as comparative data. (4) The conclusion is unfinished, even though it can answer the hypothesis questions. Compare this with the abstract, which concludes "medium, medium, medium," but the conclusion is inconsistent. (5) For me, this research is still ongoing even though the effect has been found, but what is it used for? What are the implications (impact) for Christian teachers in teaching, guiding their students, or what is bigger in their teaching and learning process? Because even without being examined, people would understand that parents' economic factors influenced the personality of these Christian teachers.
