Dear Author,

The title should be changed to "Effect of Exchange Rate and Inflation on Unemployment in Nigeria".

Based this title, the abstract should be revised.

You should be careful in using some terms such as Phillips curve not Phillip curve, trade-off not trade-off curve. The paper needs editing.

What is the novelty of your paper compared to other similar studies such as kiri (2020)?

It is better to strengthen the literature and empirical background based on all relevant studies, so your hypotheses and work will be more plausible.

Given the importance of government size, specially in developing countries, I suggest adding variables such as government size, corruption and good governance.

You should accurately define, measure, and reference the data of the variables. For example, how did you measure the productivity? What about other variables? What do you mean by "the interaction term between the inflation rate and real exchange?" Did you use the multiplicative term? If so, why?

I strongly suggest you to strengthen the data analyses.

I think there are more important policy implications than presented in the conclusion.

Best Regards
