

Review of: "Paulian Approach to Critical Thinking: Assessing an Intervention Program"

María del Mar López-Fernández¹

¹ Universidad de Granada

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I recommend describing in more detail the section "About the Critical Thinking intervention program". For the reader who is not familiar with the programme it is difficult to understand. If I wanted to replicate it with my students, there is not enough information in the article.

The section "Data analysis" is quite complete.

Where can the "situational test" be consulted?

Where can I consult A standardised test developed by Richard Paul (1995)? This quotation is not in the references.

The citation Paul & Elder (1995) is not in the references.

Overall, the article is revealing with its data and conclusions.