Review of "Users' guide to Knowledge management with concept maps and mind maps: what are these and a proposal of a workflow"

Franz Plochberger

Your differentiation of Concept and Mind Maps seem to be a god base for young starters in retrieving or seeking of Information. As experienced Information Scientist I recommend an individual way of finding knowledge by special terms in every new research.

Of course this predefined ways of learning by maps can be optimal for grate amount of new interesting data.

In getting experience in learning by Internet you should try to find an own individual way to learn. By learning first a tool you may loose your energy to research the kernel of your personal goals.