

Review of: "The Impact of Project Financial Subsidies on Project Achievement"

Thomas Abuobeleye Akpanke¹

¹ Near East University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

"The Impact of Project Financial Subsidies on Project Realization" does not really have the complete structure of a research work. The abstract lacks the focus points of the research objective, methods, and conclusion. The authors should include the major contribution in the last part of the abstract.

The introduction has to be adjusted and structured well. There is a general need for language improvement, government policy influence, economic impacts, and empirical improvements.

You have to define your methods to be well understood.

In essence, this paper needs proofreading because there are many grammatical errors and use of wrong signs and words.

Kindly check the required format for the references according to the journal; your references are mixed and not arranged well.