This study would be exciting and promising if the following points were improved.

- 1) a more comprehensive explanation. Even though it is promised in the abstract that this study provides a comprehensive explanation, this paper needs more data, both quantitative data and qualitative data (interview data).
- 2) need for more data related to weaknesses in methodology. Even though the data collection method states, "Primary data collection involves both questionnaires and interviews, while secondary data is drawn from scholarly sources," data obtained from interviews has not yet appeared, and references from relevant studies are inadequate.
- 3) because this study aims to fill the gap, as stated in the article "By bridging this gap, the study aims to equip social workers with tailored interventions that capitalize on strengths, empower communities, and drive positive change," then this explanation should appear in conclusion as the strength/novelty of this study.
