There are certain parts of the manuscript that need to be revised to improve readability:

1. A concise revision is needed for the abstract, materials and methods sections, as well as the primary objective.
2. It is difficult to understand the concept, scope, and objectives of the study from the introduction.
3. The author should also explicitly mention the ethical approval number and the committee that approved it.
4. Materials and methods should include a clearer description of the study design and criteria for participant inclusion/exclusion.
5. The technical procedures should be presented with more specificity and detail.
6. Legends are missing on graphs, and the conclusions should be rewritten to summarize the main findings.
