Antibiotic resistance is an immense problem worldwide. Studying this problem in different health care centers is a must. This is a nice piece of cross-sectional study, entitled 'Meropenem Usage Assessment amid the Antibiotic Resistance Crisis: A Comprehensive Analysis in a Tertiary Care Hospital in Pakistan'. However, the number of samples was few and should be increased depending on the number of patients attending that hospital. Also, it should relate the results with the type of culture, as well as the type of microorganisms and the names of the cephalosporins to which there was resistance, in a table. Discussion should be powered by recent references (2024) from different regions of the world.
