

Review of: "The influence of perceived financial security on social intention entrepreneurs"

Meharaj Banu Abdul Sathar

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

I have gone through the article, the topic selected was very much relevant for the today's needs for solving unemployment problem. In every country, Government has taking enormous steps to create /develop more entrepreneurs to improve their sustainable social well being. Entrepreneurs are very much encouraged by the government by providing more subsidies which inturn helps to improve the country's national income.

By reading this article, in the abstract the researcher mentioned that, the research uses two distinct measurement tools and performs separate statistical analyses using two groups of samples ($n = 340$ and 214). In research methodology it was mentioned that the sample were collected from 204 respondents and furthermore, the responses were collected from the undergraduate students. The researcher mentioned that the research were more concentrated about to know the perceived financial security of the entrepreneurs. So, my point of view the researcher may also include the tricenarian group of respondents who may have more financial commitments in their family and also helps to know how the entrepreneurship helps to fulfill their wellbeing of their family. The researcher may also include more reviews to support his /her research gap.