

Review of: "Youth Patterns of Use of Electronic Nicotine Delivery Systems (ENDS) Use, Population Assessment of Tobacco and Health (PATH) Waves 4 – 5.5"

William Evans¹

¹ George Washington University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This is an interesting and valuable article on adolescent ENDS use in the US using the PATH waves 4-5.5 datasets. Given the serious potential health risks from vaping and the epidemic of youth uptake, it is critical to understand patterns of use. The authors do a good job with their multivariate analysis and have provided a thorough explication of findings. This study will benefit future research, including interventions aimed at reducing youth vaping and increasing quitting.