Comments to the Authors and Editors

In general, the manuscript is found good and impressive; it may be considered for publication by addressing a few points, which are given below:

- The given abstract does not reflect the whole of its components; therefore, it should be rewritten by organizing a comprehensive representation of the manuscript.
- In the last paragraph of the introduction (which normally presents why this research was conducted), is not clearly present the reason (problem statement) for the study; therefore, this paragraph should be improved; why is this study organized? The reason or the cause or justification of the study is missing in the introduction. So, the last paragraph of the introduction is required about the justification of the study.
- Figure IX should be improved and readable.

So, overall the manuscript makes a healthy contribution to research, and it may be considered for publication by fulfilling the journal's requirement.
