The subject of the article is interesting in the reduction of unused water in production processes. However, the article has shortcomings in terms of the initial description of the problem. It is important to establish an overview of the context in figures or statistical graphs that show in greater detail the problem and are more useful for the reader to become interested in the subject. Likewise, it is important to show in greater detail the results and discussion, since they are presented deficiently and in list form. It is important to emphasize the argumentation and the results with more analysis, since it is a topic of great importance and the research is good.
