

Review of: "Can the definitions of SARS-Cov-2 and Covid-19 stand up to epistemological scrutiny?"

Gajanan Ghodake¹

¹ Dongguk University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Excellent article accept in current form. The existing definitions of SARS-Cov-2 and Covid-19 may not withstand rigorous epistemological scrutiny. These definitions are criticized for their inability to align with a new natural kind that would be relevant and applicable to the field of epidemiology. It raises fundamental questions about the intersection of genomics and epidemiology in the context of the Covid-19 pandemic.