This article raises a relevant issue by focusing on changes in the behavior of patients with drug use disorder during the COVID-19 pandemic.

I suggest reviewing the sample section because numbers 61 and 73 are confusing, as well as the response rate mentioned in the sample section and in the first paragraph of results.

In general, I think it is a work that provides interesting data for the characterization of the patients and their coping in the context of the pandemic with their consumption. I especially found it interesting that thoughts of suicide and the search for other ways to access drugs were not significant.
