Review some spaces between words and immediately next to punctuation marks.

I consider that the introduction needs more references because much of the information lacks a source for verification.

For information from newspapers, there is not a rigorous classification work, compared to the quantity, specific data, or repetitions. The data is very broad and cannot be proven.

I consider that Image 5 does not contribute to the text.

The graphs allow recognizing the coincidence of problems in the selected areas; however, they lack details that allow verifying the data and replicating the research. A detailed graphical relationship of the characteristics of the presented edges could be presented because the description of the place is vague so far.

It is necessary to describe in detail the methodology to avoid the statements appearing as opinions without supporting data. It is essential to describe each of the activities, frequencies, representative sample, and clearly state how the various phases of the research are articulated because they are currently disjointed.
