The review article about "Disruption, Diversity, and Due Diligence: Charting the Course for Coffee's Future—Key Takeaways from the International Coffee Convention 2024 (ICC2024)" is clear and effectively summarizes the key insights from the event. It highlights the convention as an excellent example of bringing together people from academia, the industry, and beyond.

Here are some further suggestions from my side, which could improve the article:

For consistency:

- When referring to the event, there's some inconsistency in how it's named in the introduction. After you already mentioned the "International Coffee Convention 2023 (ICC2023)," you surely can abbreviate the ICC2024 in the following text.
- Also, consider using uniform date formatting (e.g., "October 17, 2024" vs. "17 October 2024").

For clarity:

- Some sentences contain multiple subordinate clauses, which can make the text harder to follow. Breaking these longer sentences into shorter ones would improve readability and clarity (e.g., "The timing of the convention proved particularly significant, coinciding with the opening days of rem's groundbreaking exhibition "Essen und Trinken" (Food and Drink), running from 13 October 2024 through 27 July 2025, which explores the cultural and scientific dimensions of human nutrition across time.).

Overall, the article is clear, emphasizing the event's interdisciplinary nature and important issues like climate change and sustainability. It provides great insights and opens up new possibilities for future discussions, encouraging ongoing participation in the coffee community.
