While the topic presented by the authors is quite interesting, i find it quite necessary to admit that most of the opinions shared in the article are products of subjective imagination and not facts based on empirical or theoretical foundation. So many statements were made by the authors without any form of references or academic sources to back up on these claims. besides i think the first paragraph in the paper should be termed the introduction section, which i think its more in line with conventional academic convention. in addition, i advice the authors to embrace the opportunities inherent in numerous relevant literature on this topic to provide a more solid foundation for the whole article. also, it would be more appropriate if authors can be more academic in their style of presentation.
