I congratulate the authors for choosing this topic; however, this draft needs major revision.

To begin with, the methodology section states that this is a case-control study. However, upon further examination, it appears that this study aligns more closely with a cross-sectional study. Therefore, it would be advisable to revise the methodology section accordingly.

In addition, the results and discussion would benefit from further development. In particular, it would be useful to compare the findings of these patients with those of healthy individuals, as this would yield additional insights into the research.

I trust that this feedback will be helpful in advancing the authors' research.
