Thank you for the privilege to review this article. It is clear that the authors have invested so much in producing this piece however, something is wrong with the research methods. The researchers said they adopted a qualitative correlational research design and collected data through focus group discussions and semi-structured questionnaires. Do you mean to say a mixed method? It is unclear what type of data was collected through the semi-structured questionnaire and how this was analysed. The result section showed that data were analysed quantitatively, there seems to be a significant confusion here. The whole manuscript will also benefit from English editing. There seems to be a lot of typographical error and grammar errors too. The introduction is not well explored, it needs modification to show the rationale for your study or show the gaps that your study intends to fill.
