

Review of: "Mimicking Humanity: The Use of Anthropomorphism in Ted Hughes' Nature Poetry"

Anna Karin Gunnarsson Dinker¹

¹ Halmstad University College

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

This paper dealing with anthropomorphism in Ted Hughes poetry would greatly benefit from engaging with other sources on human-animal literature, especially more critical ones. In this way it could become a valuable contribution to a debate on whether and how anthropomorphism now and in the past could contribute to interspecies understanding and justice. I also think a short background on Ted Hughes and his relation to animals and nature would be very useful. The piece needs to be restructured with proper referencing, less repetitive use of words and more in depth analysis and discussion.