Thank you for your effort in undertaking this important research focusing mental health issues. I read the paper with great interest and I think obtaining the instruments' validity and reliability metrics would be crucial. Reliability and validity are not inherent characteristics of the instruments; rather, they are dependent on the samples being assessed, I agree. Besides, there is no explanation for why those who received only a portion of the vaccinations choose not to complete the course of vaccinations. The cognitive contribution should be highlighted in the conclusion; offering intervention recommendations is a hurried process. I hope to read a revised version soon. Thank you.
