- The introduction covers multiple important topics on aspects to consider in the construction of buildings. Important and exciting information is presented; however, it has no context or relationship to the previous idea. This can be seen in the last two paragraphs of the introduction, which is why it is recommended to verify the wording to ensure consistency.
- In section 2.1. established by the case study, it is recommended to place a reference to the type of climate. On the other hand, it is recommended to restructure this section by placing a first paragraph that addresses the region's characteristics and another in which the case study is described in detail.
- It is requested to improve the quality of the figures and tables. On the other hand, it is recommended to maintain the same format in the tables.
