

Review of: "Microinsurance: Bibliography of Unclassified Literature"

Shymaa Bedaiwy<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> University of Massachusetts Boston

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The topic is very timely and important. however, the paper needs serious organization to make it accessible and easy to grasp. I would suggest reorganizing the content under subtitles. It is very uncommon to have paper with this length with no subtitles at all. I see that the author already summarizing the different perspectives of the studies reviewd in page 38, so I suggest reorganzing studies reviews under subtitles. Like for instance, grouping papers that were interested in history of microinsurance in India together under one subtitle, and so on... It is important also I guess to add a gender perspective to the reviews. Any of the studies/papers were dedicated to impact on women? Microcredit was originally introduced for women in Bangladesh so it is very difficult to miss impact on women or role of women when it comes to reviewing microinsurance.