Good work done by the authors.

The following are my observations:

1. The literature review is list-like and non-informative. It should connect the present work with comparisons to them.
2. Many pieces of literature are old; hence, the purpose of the current research is found missing.
3. The methodology, if presented in a flowchart, may attract the readers
4. It seems that there is no experimental or field data for verification. Hence, the results are somehow without a firm basis.
5. The contribution to the body of knowledge, as well as the practicality/usability in the real world, is just not there.
6. The collected data may be used for model development using artificial neural networks, which would be helpful in decision making.
7. The conclusions & recommendations are very generic.
