

Review of: "The Parental Role in Child Sexuality: A Phenomenological Study"

Inês Camacho<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Universidade Catolica Portuguesa

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

Points for reflection:

Positive points: a very current subject that proves to be important in the harmonious development of the child and in communication between parents and children.

It should be noted that the article is quite extensive, sometimes there are separate paragraphs without references.

They could summarize the bibliographic review and include more current references.

They use the we inappropriately, the 3rd person should be used.

The methodology is confusing, description data repeated in tables and graphs.

In the methodology, unnecessary information appears, which makes the methodology even more extensive

Conclusions are confusing