Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

1-The article's topic is interesting, although it is very broad and causes the article to break up.

2-The topic of the article is not defined clearly, and recent articles are not referenced.

3-The abstract is too long and while many explanations are provided, the conclusion is not included.

4-The article is mostly in the form of a report and does not have the usual structure of an academic article.

5-In parts 2, 3, 4 and 5, the issue is raised without providing sufficient evidence and is left half-baked. For example, in the unemployment section, only statistical data are provided, which do not match each other, and no analysis is provided.

Also, in the inflation section, the issue has been left unfinished, for example, how does the mentioned Ukraine conflict directly affect the inflation in Ethiopia?

6- Long and confusing sentences are often used.

7- Numerous abbreviations are given in the text without definition.

8-The Recommendation section is given without reference to articles or analysis, and the basis for the items mentioned in this section is not considered.
