

Review of: "The Consequences of Political and Economic Choices: Exploring Disaster Vulnerability with the Structure, Resource, and Behaviour Change model (SRAB)"

Yaoyao Wu¹

¹ Beijing Normal University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The study develops a model to explore disaster vulnerability from the perspectives of structure, resource, and behavior change, which is meaningful for the disaster risk governance. And I believe the manuscript needs the following revisions to provide scientifically sound argument.

1. The "Recent disasters in the Vietnamese Mekong Delta" is better to be brief in Introduction part and be concrete in Research setting part.
2. The authors need to discuss how these findings contribute to the existing studies and the recommendation for future studies in discussion section.
3. In the conclusion section there are no limitations described, thus such should be added.