Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

1. The paper lacks a summary of the method before presenting the details. This makes it complex to read and understand.
2. The author should compare the proposed algorithm with other recent works or provide a discussion. Otherwise, it's hard for the reader to identify the novelty and contribution of this work.
All results indicated in the table need to be properly explained.
3. More experiments, especially comparative experiments, should be involved to verify the performance of the proposed algorithm.
