I agree with other researchers commenting on the article, this is an important piece of work in empowering women and needs to be improved to be considered for publication. I would also add: the research question is very broad. Narrowing in on one country and focusing on one aspect of living conditions of women might help sharpening your argument and strengthening your voice throughout the article. I would improve methodology by adding interviews, for instance interviewing a few women and seeing how the changes have influenced their lives or interviewing with officials who are working on the issue in both countries or just one to be more manageable.
