Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The manuscript "The Effects of Greenery in Balconies of Apartments on People's Well-Being: Using Virtual Reality" is an original paper that shows the impact and importance of using virtual reality as a method employed to measure spatial perception.

The reference to the figures is missing in the text. Figure legends should communicate large amounts of complex information that would be complicated to explain in the text. And, in the text, the reference to the figure must appear in order and follow coherence.

Table 4 and Table 5 have significant results. However, the reading is not easy nor dynamic to follow. The authors could present the results in other ways to be more friendly. I invite you to read our work as an example to present the results: <https://doi.org/10.1007/s11252-022-01204-z>

Finally, this study provides a valuable contribution by presenting ample evidence to demonstrate constructive principles that contribute to well-being.
