I want to commend the efforts of the authors in putting together this article. I believe this article can be termed an opinion essay or position paper. That explains why the traditional structure of a research paper was not followed. However, I will like to call the attention of the authors to a few observations:

1. Your topic did not reflect the actual content of your article. I did not see any thorough exploration of the concepts encapsulated in your topic. Issues around liberalism and conservatism are however well articulated in your paper. I will therefore kindly suggest that you review your topic to reflect these.
2. Your stated opinion that - "Currently, in many countries around the world, the wellbeing and mental state of most citizens are not good. The wellbeing and mental health status of the public is now objectively evaluated" is too generic. Which country? What public? It would be nice if you are more specific in mentioning or listing a few of these countries.
3. Your thoughts are all over the place. You overemphasized social and political issues around liberalism and conservatism and paid little or no attention to how sexual and ambitious attitudes threatened social and individual wellbeing. This gave your article a lopsided and unbalanced view. I was eagerly waiting to read about HOW sexual and ambitious attitudes ACTUALLY threatened the global societal functioning and individual wellbeing but unfortunately, your article paid no attention to this at all.
4. I was in anticipation to read about HOW "authoritarian regimes maintained a patriarchal social structure based on the traditional system of customary taboo, adhering to religious mandates". I was also tirelessly searching for HOW psychological and social situation led to vast variations in legal regulations in individual countries regarding dilemmas such as the legality of adultery, pornography, prostitution, the permissibility of abortion, and sex education". You merely scratched the surface in this regard in one or two line. This is unacceptable. These are grey areas that needed to be further explored. Exploring and further expanding on them should make your write-up a more interesting read.
5. I will like to suggest that you thoroughly explore your concepts, ideas and opinions in details instead of merely scratching them on the surface. This will give your article more depths making it more enjoyable to read.
6. If you may, kindly change "Threatens for Global Societal Functioning and Individual Wellbeing" to "Threat of Global Societal Functioning and Individual Wellbeing".
7. Lastly, I will suggest that you also examine the current socio-political happenings in Kim Jong-un's North Korea. This will further strengthen the content of your article. Once again, I applaud the work and efforts you have put into writing this article. Well done!
