The content of the article is very light in detail and too generic with no serious review of current practices in literature even though the author mentioned in the title and abstract. I suggest the author conducts a more thorough search of literature, reads the relevant articles and outlines key points in using AI in E-learning from these articles. I assume the author focus on tertiary education. There is a number of studies in recent years on using AI in education including E-learning. The current manuscript does not provide extensive literature search and only give a skeleton structure of what to be expected. The study is incomplete.
