Comments

1. Authors should indicate somewhere (preferably at the beginning of the document) that this is a review contribution since readers might expect experimental stuff to contrast a hypothesis.
2. Abstract. The stated objective of this research ("to conserve this unique plant species endemic to Borneo and provide economic benefits to local communities") is too broad to be achieved in a practical manner. Please formulate the objective in a more specific way to contrast any hypothesis that is proposed based on the knowledge that the authors have of this plant genetic resource in the area.
3. To remedy the aforementioned concern, I suggest relocating the objective mentioned at the beginning of the Introduction ("This chapter aims to explore the nutritional composition and functional properties of ragimot, shedding light on its significance in the domains of food and medicine") in the Abstract.
