

Review of: "Corruption in the medical field: Facts from Nigeria"

Olha S. Bondarenko¹

¹ Sumy State University

Potential competing interests: No potential competing interests to declare.

The article addresses a truly interesting topic. It is informative and substantive. However, the structure appears quite simple. I believe it would be beneficial to separately highlight measures to combat corruption in the medical field and thoroughly analyze how these corruption risks can impact the nation's health. Additionally, I consider the international aspect important, particularly the connection with sustainable development goals and international programs.